Rules of Participation

Public Session – Analysis of the Environmental Impact Statement

Contrecoeur Port Terminal Expansion Project

The rules of participation in the public session are designed to facilitate the participation of all interested persons and ensure respect for participants, the proponent, its consultants and the members of the federal environmental assessment committee making up the panel. They are also designed to maintain a climate conducive to discussion in order to gather questions and comments from the public concerning the Montreal Port Authority's Environmental Impact Statement.

All participants in the consultation process agree to abide by the following rules:

- Anyone who wants to ask questions or provide comments at the public session is asked to register upon arrival at the reception desk at the entrance of the room.
- The discussions must take in place a respectful manner for all individuals. Participants are asked to present their questions in a calm and moderate tone. Personal attacks and abusive or threatening language will not be tolerated.
- Individuals must avoid applauding or being noisy during the questions and answer period to allow the assembly to hear what is being said.
- The facilitator will inform participants and resource persons when it is their turn to speak.
- The questions and comments must relate to the project under study and the Environmental Impact Statement or the environmental assessment process. This consultation takes place during the period where federal environmental assessment committee members analyze the Environmental Impact Statement of the proponent. Therefore, it is possible that the committee might not be able to answer certain questions, since the analysis is not completed.
- Questions must be directed to the facilitator, who will refer them to the appropriate contact. Individuals are invited to mention their name and their group affiliation if applicable.
- Each participant has a limited time to ask questions or make comments. It is possible for an individual to ask more questions later in the evening by registering again at the reception desk.
- The public session will be held in French, but if someone wishes to ask a question in English, it will be possible to do so.

The facilitator reserves the right to interrupt the participant or end the session if the rules of participation are not followed.
